

Colour, chemistry and crustaceans

This whole blog actually started because of the colour of some shrimps I was cooking. Crustacean muscle is grey in colour- but when you cook it, it turns pink. So I sat in my kitchen pondering this, then did a bit of digging.

Can science and art co-exist?

Artistic and scientific skills should not be exclusive but embedded in every subject taught